

ADULUX BESKAN

* Ny Slarr-toquo avron val Dawlal Patca *

Yotl 3

Slarr-X, 1944

Oquenlan: Donald A. Wollheim, New York.

CORRECTION - FANCYCLOPEDIA!

Page 22, the article on Dawnish contains the following insert "a sly slash at Ackerman's advocacy (of Esperanto), from the long ago days when Wollheim strongly disliked him." Besides being incorrect in its implication as to the motive underlying the creation of Dawnish, the Universal Language, it is the recollection of those New Yorkers who saw the original ms. of the Fancyclopedia that no such remark appeared. Thus it would seem to be a sly insert of Ackerman's, giving himself credit (albeit negative credit) in the origin of Dawnish. As might easily have been ascertained, Dawnish was constructed years before Ackerman ever heard of Esperanto and before Daw became an active fan. It was the by-product of several weeks intensive library research into the problem of the artificial tongue. It was not any mere effort to spite the rather childish FJA of 1935. We did not think him worthy of such spite concentration.

TRYNVAL, AKTION!

Forrest Ackerman ky emyl-kiy val urmm rish cww avron sahr-oavar beskanlu. Mlu ky ny thandor varinon na uvvianlal chur-helma-gravlux; v'v'voolan rishux, quindlat'hal dzyvvux, arz'y'mallan varbahlux. Ackerman kevor, mlan ky emau, kiy enis oach rex val vlvch mlu ky!

--Oquenlan