

HISTORICAL HUGO HYSTERICIS

Historical Hugo Hysterics was prepared by Jeffrey Copeland for the 229th mailing of the Southern Fandom Press Alliance and selected others. It is published by Bywater Press, 3243 165th Ave, SE, Bellevue, Washington 98008. The text of Historical Hugo Hysterics was composed using a set of Perl scripts and the T_EX typesetting system, and is set in 10-point Goudy Old Style. The original of this publication was printed on 2 September 2002 (first thing on the morning after the ConJosé Hugo ceremony) and it was reproduced by the Xerographic process. (For the record, “Hugo Award” is a service mark of the World Science Fiction Society, an unincorporated literary society.)

SEVERAL YEARS AGO, Liz asked me to look up the list of Hugo fiction nominees for the preceeding ten years or so, so that she could catch up on current science fiction. (We'd stopped reading the stuff after the readers' orgy we had when we administered the awards.) With some web searching, and some reference to Worldcon program books, I was able to do so. I also provided a list of Nebula nominees for the same period. Shortly thereafter, she published that combined list in SFFPA.

Last fall, looking for something else, I tripped over the original list I put together for Liz. As the Purveyor of Hugo Software to the Trade, I realized I have a particular interest in the results, so I began to compile a complete list of all the Hugo, Retro Hugo, and Nebula fiction nominees and winners. I added the best dramatic presentation category to the list after some conversation in the last few SFFPAs. That dramatic presentation discussion was the impetus to print and share this list.

In addition to my original notes and delving back into my collection of Worldcon program books, several web sites were very useful: Laurie Mann provides a list at <http://dpsinfo.com/awardweb/>; Locus has a comprehensive list of all sorts of SF awards at <http://www.locusmag.com/SFAwards/>; the definitive list of Hugo winners is at the Worldcon web site, <http://worldcon.org/hugos.html>; the definitive list of Nebula winners is at <http://sfwa.org/awards/>.

(Just to forestall questions: we're missing two years in this list because there were no fiction awards given at London in 1957, and no Hugos given out in 1954. Further, I have been unable to find the nominees lists for 1953, 1955, 1956, or 1958. Bruce Pelz might have been able to unearth or provide pointers to that information, but unfortunately, I realized I needed it too late.)

For this publication, I've not included the Nebulas or Retro Hugos. The Nebula list has a large overlap with this list; the Retro Hugos are even more a name-recognition contest than the current awards.

This data all exists in a CSV file, suitable for many spreadsheets; however since it's ASCII with internal structure, it can be read by anything else, like the Perl program that produced the markup for the volume you hold. I'll be happy to share the file and software on request.

We also have a list of each author's nominated works. Each title is listed only by first author, with cross-references for subsequent authors. The year and category are provided for each entry in the list, so you can flip back and see what the competition was. The abbreviations for the category are shown at the top of the pages in this section — whose brilliant idea was it to give three of the categories names beginning with N? By that logic, shouldn't "short story" be "novellini?"
