

LATE-BREAKING BULLETIN: Long-rumored issues of EGOSCAN finally mailed! Yes, the January and June, 1985 issues of EGO-SCAN have been mailed out First Class to all recipients, after failing to make it into the Bulk Mail for Many Months.

When queried, editor White shook his head and said, "I just don't understand it! How could those issues sit around, collated, folded, addressed, and ready-to-mail for all these months? What's fandom coming to, anyway?" He offered no other explanation for the tardy mailing except "the press of other things...you know, starting up a new prozine, going to Australia, stuff like that...."

The PONG Poll Ballots, unwitting hostages to this delayed mailing, are the real victims, White admitted. "Tell you what -- I'll extend the deadline for the Ballots' return," he said. "Make it, umm, oh, October 31st." He was unsure whether anyone still remembered 1984, but hoped a few would. "After all, we're living in the future now," he pointed out.

The final two EGOSCANs were mailed on the same day as CRANK #1, and should reach recipients at about the same time, it was noted.

Meanwhile, residents of the West Coast are still waiting for The Big One....
