To all readers of Dagon:

Sometime on the weekend of Easter, I will be moving to a new address. This results from my daughter's move out of the home which she presently shares with her daughter and son-in-law and their child. She has located a place in Clarksburg, Maryland, a small town a short distance from Frederick, from which she will be easily able to drive to her job in Frederick. Her new place is big enough for both of us, as we will each be able to live on a separate floor. Its address is 12716 Ginger Wood Lane, Clarksburg, MD 20871. My land-line phone number will be 301-515-4271, and my cell-phone number will remain 718-737-4901. I will be settled at the new address by Saturday 4 April.

I had intended to announce this in the April issue of Dagon, for which I had written almost all the pages on my computer, which I use solely as a word processor. However, that file has somehow vanished, and I have been unable to recover it on my computer, even with the help of several people more familiar with computers than I am. Moreover, there is not enough time to rewrite the April Dagon and get copies to Mark Blackman for the April Distribution of APA-Q. So instead I am sending this letter to all recipients of Dagon, including members of APA-Q. I will then prepare a May issue of Dagon, with features that I had planned to print in the April issue, and get it to Mark by the collation date for the May APA-Q, which will possibly be 1 May.

Those fans of my reviews of detective stories with historical settings will be gratified to know that the May Dagon will include reviews of Edward Marston's The Silent Woman (1994) and The Roaring Boy (1995), set in the reign of Queen Elizabeth I. There will also be another installment of the history of the Four And A Half Kingdoms.

Stay well,

John Boardman
