THE QUIZ

This month we have the Annual Quiz versus members of the Birmingham University SF Group. A Pub Quiz style event with several teams from each Group competing for honours and prizes. Questions will be from all aspects of the SF world – books, magazines, artwork, films, TV series, plays, authors, editors, artists, actors, etc., even children's fantasy like DR WHO so if you have a particular area of weakness, NOW is the time to start revising. Or have you already left it too late to re-read every issue of ANALOG again, or rewatch every surviving episode of DR WHO? Only you know your weak areas – start reading and start watching!

The meeting will take place in the conference room on the first floor of the Briar Rose Hotel, Bennetts Hill just off New Street. The entrance to the hotel is adjacent to Wetherspoon's on the right.

The doors open at 7.30pm and the meeting will commence at 8.00pm so please arrive early, get your drinks from the bar on the ground floor, and be seated in plenty of time.

March 9th – SF author TONY BALLANTYNE will be speaking to the Group. His books are RECURSION, CAPACITY and DIVERGENCE. Have you read them yet?

THE NEW DR WHO

*real* new doctor was announced as Matt Smith just one day after the newsletter was posted. Our apologies, but in our defence please note the wording ‘reportedly confirmed’. We give you the information we have. Checking and confirming its accuracy is not always possible. The secrecy surrounding the new Doctor was something I personally had no knowledge of until later. ## ‘THE DAY OF THE TRIFFIDS’ DAWNS AGAIN By Vernon Brown

Another visual interpretation of Wyndham’s THE DAY OF THE TRIFFIDS is set to hit the small screen in the autumn as a four-hour mini-series on BBC1. Last seen in 1981 as a television adaptation which was much better, to say the least, than the 1961 film version, this new production will cost around £10 million.

However, I wonder whether this will be another example of PC and CGI in a film obscuring the essence of the original story, much as, say, the latest film version of THE TIME MACHINE has moved a long way from the novel.

Speaking of the 1981 triffids the producer Justin Bodie says that they were a bit like ‘shuffling leeks’. “We have spent a year creating the new triffids. You will not be able to just run away from them”. Presumably they have now been crossed with cheetahs! He also says that people kept them as pets so “they have to be beautiful as well as being able to turn into something terrifying and ugly”. He’s wrong - it became a fashion to have a docked triffid in the garden just as nowadays a rotweiler is fashionable in some quarters. Fashion does not necessarily equate with pets or beauty.

He also says that the film will be closer to the book than previous versions. “It’s chillingly topical, dealing with Man’s rush to do anything it can to replace fossil fuels irrespective of damage to the environment and the impact of something going wrong”. He must have read a different version of the book that I read! In my book triffids were developed as a renewable source of food oils for humans and animals, replacing fish and whale oils among others. In other words they were environmentally green! And I doubt that anyone could possibly foresee that a meteor storm would trigger satellite weapons that malfunction and blind most of humanity.

Perhaps I am a little too harsh. It’s impossible to reproduce exactly on screen, material that has been written to be read. The techniques used to create the desired impact in the viewers/readers mind are so different, but I hope that not too much of the original classic story has been altered. Either way, I look forward to seeing what has been created. VB

NOTES ON THE ILLUSTRATIONS

1) Cover of the hardcover First Edition – Doubleday USA 1951

2) The first paperback edition – Popular Library USA 1952. REVOLT of course, sounds far better than DAY!!!! Also note the scantily clad female later used in movie posters, etc. I haven’t read this book for 50 years but didn’t everyone cover up with plenty of clothing because the triffids gave a very serious sting? Brave girl!

3) Italian poster for the 1961 movie. Translated as INVASION OF THE GREEN MONSTERS which sounds ever better than REVOLT!!!!. Note the destruction to the skyscrapers – not in the book, not in the movie.

NEWS IN BRIEF . . .

.... Donald E Westlake died of a heart attack in Mexico on New Years Eve. He was 75. Westlake's career as a novelist and screen writer spanned over 50 years, during which he had over 100 books published, primarily mysteries. He was a science fiction fan who contributed letters to fanzines and wrote short fiction. A collection of his science fiction detective stories was published as TOMORROW'S CRIMES, in 1981. Westlake received three Edgar Awards and was named Grand Master by the Mystery Writers of America in 1993. His screenplay for the motion picture THE GRIFTERS was nominated for an Academy Award in 1991 .... Producer Charles H Schneer (b.1920) died on January 21. Schneer produced the films CLASH OF THE TITANS, THE GOLDEN VOYAGE OF SINBAD and JASON AND THE ARGONAUTS in addition to many more films ....

Actor Patrick McGoochan (b.1928) died on January 13. McGoochan won two Emmys for his work on Columbo but is best known for his role as Number Six in The Prisoner .... Actor Ricardo Montalban (b.1920) died on January 14. Montalban is best known for his portrayal of Mr. Roarke on the original Fantasy Island and for the role of Khan in the "Space Seed" episode of Star Trek and again in STAR TREK II: THE WRATH OF KHAN. Montalban also appeared in

CONQUEST OF THE PLANET OF THE APES and the made-for-television Wonder Woman movie .... Celestis, Inc. has announced that it will launch a spacecraft next year which will contain the remains of Gene Roddenberry and Majel Barrett Roddenberry. Some of Roddenberry's ashes were previously launched into space on a 1997 Celestis launch, but this launch will take the remainder of his remains and tributes from fans on a journey which will not return them to Earth .... Neil Gaiman's THE

GRAVEYARD BOOK won the John Newbery Medal, presented by the Association for Library Service to Children. The award, given each year since 1922 is considered to be one of the most prestigious honours in children's literature .... Gavin J Grant has announced that the venerable YEAR'S BEST FANTASY AND HORROR series, begun in 1988 will not have an edition released this year. The anthology series was edited by Ellen Datlow and Terri Windling from 1988 through 2003. Grant and Kelly Link took over for Windling in 2004. Datlow has announced that Night Shade Press will be publishing at least two years of a Year's Best Horror anthology, covering 2008 and 2009 .... HarperCollins UK has announced the forthcoming publication of a previously unpublished work by J R R Tolkien. THE LEGEND OF SIGURD AND GUDRZN was written by Tolkien in the 1920s and 30s, before he wrote THE HOBBIT. It is a retelling of the Norse tales of Sigurd and the Fall of the Niflungs. The manuscript has been edited by Tolkien's son, Christopher Tolkien .... The Science Fiction Poetry Association has announced the recipient of the 2008 Dwarf Stars Award, which is given to the best short speculative poem of 10 lines or less published in the previous year, as voted upon by its membership. # 😊😊😊😊 FILM ROUND-UP ☹️☹️☹️☹️

BY VICKY COOK

I AM LEGEND* – 2007 (dir: Francis Lawrence)

Starring Will Smith and Alice Braga

This is the third adaptation from the 1954 Richard Matheson novel. This one stars Will Smith as Robert Neville, a scientist left alone when a disease-destroying drug turns every other person on the planet into crazed monsters. With an aversion to UV light, they hide away by day and come out at nightfall. The film follows his actions by day with the whole city to himself and follows his emotional journey as he faces loneliness, depression and internal as well as external demons. He also strives to discover a cure for the virus, using lab rats and later a captive. This leads the Alpha male of the other beings to seek him out, leading to a final stand-off.

The film leaves out much which made the book so memorable and different to the norm, which to my mind is a real shame. Matheson explored the idea of two types of ‘infected’ – depending whether they lived or died - and the former being more human and less ‘crazed’ are able to communicate and develop. It is a shame the film never delves into this idea. The ‘I Am Legend’ which refers to the scientist being a sort of ‘bogeyman’ himself to the more developed ‘infected’ is changed utterly. Smith is ‘legend’ due to his inexplicable immunity to the virus, which is airborne as well as through contact. The film, like the book, introduces a female protagonist but without giving too much away, she is dealt with completely differently here.

Overall though, I enjoyed the film. The latter part of the film, as the action picked up, did not affect me but I was really struck by the depiction of the main character in the middle of this world-changing event. He was not just a macho tough guy blasting zombies - you could really feel for him. I’d say purists of the book might not like the omissions and changes, and unfortunately some people did not like the film because it was too slow, but I, not usually a fan of this sort of film, appreciated the more thought-provoking aspects and that the monsters were not just plain zombies but evolved into a sort of semi-vampire, semi-monster. CGI being what it is nowadays, they were surprisingly less gruesome than I expected. Worth watching. In order to compare, we’ve just ordered THE OMEGA MAN and LAST MAN ON EARTH (the two other film versions of this book) to watch too.

THE ILLUSIONIST* – 2007 (dir: Neil Burger)

Starring Edward Norton, Paul Giamatti and Jessica Biel.

Now to a completely different film. Starring Edward Norton, THE ILLUSIONIST features a magician who can apparently summon up spirits of the dead, shocking the 19th century populace. The plot thickens when he falls in love with the fiancé of a prince. The film leaves you to consider whether or not these spirits are real. The ending implies not, but the question is never explained fully. Most of the film is from the viewpoint of Inspector Uhl - Paul Giamatti (excellent) as he learns more about the magician's tricks and we share his surprise and shock at new developments. Quiet, interesting film leaving you with questions unanswered.

THE HAPPENING* – 2008 (dir: M Night Shymalan)

Starring Mark Wahlberg and Zooey Deschanel

THE HAPPENING is the latest offering from M.Night Shymalan and involves a family caught up in the midst of a strange spate of apparent suicides. As the number of casualties grow, we share the main character's confusion and growing fear at this event they cannot comprehend, and as they try to work out why it keeps happening. Badly rated on first release, we found it an interesting film. It doesn't easily slot into any particular genre, with elements from science fiction, horror and drama, which may confuse the more mainstream audience.

THE INVASION* – 2007 (dir: Oliver Hirschbiegel)

Starring Nicole Kidman and Daniel Craig

THE INVASION is INVASION OF THE BODYSNATCHERS brought up to date. Again we found it was better than critics would suggest; again it was badly panned on first release. It loses some of the older film's originality and suspense but is still watchable. Nicole Kidman does a good job as usual and there are suitably poignant scenes as she battles with herself as well as the external aliens. The original film (1956) strongly referenced Communism and it would be hard to attract a modern audience in the same way but the change of method of infection to an alien flu-like virus was, if a bit predictable, a good way to do that.

THE MOON IS A HARSH MISTRESS* by Robert A Heinlein

Gollancz SF Masterworks / 382pgs / hardback / £7.99 / ISBN: 978-0575 082410

Reviewed by Michael Jones

First published in 1966, this is one of Heinlein's several Hugo Award winning novels. It is set on the Moon where what began as a penal colony is now a thriving community of some three million inhabitants. The main theme is the successful move by this colony to break away from Earth control and become independent, an idea having an obvious resonance in the USA which fought its own War of Independence a couple of centuries ago. A secondary theme describes how a computer system on the Moon achieves spontaneous Artificial Intelligence leading to self-awareness and this computer entity becomes an ally of the rebels – it is safe to say that without its help their rebellion would have been quite impossible.

It is typical of Heinlein's writing that life in the Lunar Colony is fully realised and conveyed to the reader in total detail virtually by inference alone, with no lengthy pauses for explanation, in the same way that a mainstream writer finds no need to explain the function of a street lamp, say, or a bus stop. Having said that, it must be admitted that he veers into the polemical at times to express his belief in the freedom of the individual as opposed to a heavy-handed system of government, a proposition which a science fiction story of this kind is well-suited to display.

For all that, the story mostly rattles along at a tremendous pace, with incidents of excitement and emotion, and one finds oneself rooting for the Loonies all the way even if they are a bunch of scruffy rebels.

One has to bear in mind that this was written over forty years ago. There are incipient signs of the strangeness which infused Heinlein's later work (having perhaps begun with STRANGER IN A STRANGE LAND a few years earlier) but apart from that SF readers have probably become more sophisticated since then. It is easy to look back from our present-day perspective and decry much of this book but to do so is to belittle its many good points. To be sure there are faults to be found if you really want to seek for them, but this nevertheless represents one of the all-time greatest SF writers at his cracking best.

THE FADE by Chris Wooding

Gollancz / 312pgs / paperback / £7.99 / ISBN 978-0575082984

Reviewed by Michael Jones

This story is set in vast underground caverns beneath the surface of a moon of a giant planet orbiting in the system of a double star. Here dwell various apparently human-derived races who were forced to retreat from the surface when the stars became much hotter than previously. Now, two of the leading races are fighting a bitter and seemingly endless war. It is told from the point of view of a female soldier, a kind of super-ninja, who as well as being a ruthless killing machine can on demand serve as a spy or an assassin.

At the beginning of the book she is fighting in a vicious battle which ends with her and her fellows betrayed and she taken prisoner. Following is the story of her escape and seeming rehabilitation as she attempts to achieve vengeance for her betrayal and personal loss.

All this is set against the detailed and excellently realised background of a strange world and its totally alien flora and fauna. It is so well described as almost to banish the doubts one might otherwise feel about the plausibility of it all.

I might have liked the book better had it not been written mostly in the present tense, which I always think is a very contrived affectation, even if it does in fact pass largely unnoticed (so why bother?). Worse still, it is laid out so that it begins with Chapter 30: subsequent chapters count down to 0 and are interlaced with a series of flashback chapters counting up to 40 but in reverse order as regards the times to which they refer. Again - why? - although it is possible to detect some underlying connections if one studies hard enough.

In fact this is probably a better book than I have made it sound. It has a fascinating background, characters one can empathise with, moments of excitement and a dramatic and unexpected denouement. Most of all, the more effort you are prepared to put into reading it the more you will get out of it.

AN ICE COLD GRAVE by Charlaine Harris

Gollancz / 280pgs / £6.99 / paperback / ISBN: 978-0575083998

Reviewed by Pauline Morgan

Harris is the creator of off-beat heroines. In this series, of which this is the third, Harper Connelly has become able to find dead bodies. The corpses can tell her who they are and how they died, but not, if they were murder victims, who killed them. She works with her step-brother, Tolliver Lang, who acts as her manager and driver. Sometimes she is just asked to find out if someone died peacefully, perhaps to confirm that death was from natural causes. Occasionally, the corpse is a murder victim.

In AN ICE COLD GRAVE, Harper is invited to Doraville in mid-winter to look for a missing boy. His grandmother and the local sheriff have exhausted the usual methods and now Twyla Cotton, the grandmother, is prepared to explore psychic avenues. Despite the problems of not knowing where to begin searching, Harper is far too successful and finds the grisly remains of eight boys, all tortured to death and buried in an isolated spot. As the weather closes in, Harper becomes the target of the killer trying to cover his tracks, thinking she knows more than she does.

As in all of Harris's novels, she does not only tell an excellent story, but also allows her characters to develop and moves their lives along. In AN ICE COLD GRAVE, the relationship between Harper and Tolliver undergoes a dramatic change, which will colour how she deals with them in future novels. This is light, enjoyable reading which sucks you into the lives of the characters.

THE COLOUR OF MAGIC & THE LIGHT FANTASTIC

by Terry Pratchett

Gollancz / 424 pages / hardcover /

£20 / ISBN 978-0575085091

Reviewed by Michael Jones

1983 saw the publication of the first of the Discworld novels, THE COLOUR OF MAGIC, and this handsome volume has been produced to celebrate the 25th Anniversary of that event. THE LIGHT FANTASTIC is also included, despite not coming along until three years later, but both of those volumes were published by the tiny publisher Colin Smythe and prices for first editions are now into four-figures. The 25 year marker seemed the perfect chance to get these two books republished under the Gollancz imprint.

The Discworld, and the books about it, have changed enormously through the intervening years and it is interesting to look back at these first efforts. The first was written as a spoof, an ‘anti-fantasy’ counter to all the works of heroic fantasy which preceded it and with no conception of the series to which it would lead. Consequently, of the characters who have become the mainstay of the later books only Rincewind, the cowardly wizard, and Death are significantly present although embryonic versions of such organisations as The Unseen University, The City Watch and The Patrician’s Office are also to be found. Very much in evidence however are the style, the humour and the plundering ( and merciless sending-up ) of familiar fantasy sources such as Anne McCaffrey and Robert E. Howard ( to name but two of many ). The second book was more structured, more of a story with a plot rather than a series of loosely-related episodes.

Anything by Pratchett is always worth reading for itself and these early efforts are no exception. He has however gone on record as saying that if he had known then what the Discworld concept would later become, these first books would have been different, and better. Whatever, if this publication can bring new readers into the fold, whether or not it be on the back of the TV movie, it cannot be a bad thing.

Whether existing and confirmed readers will need this new production is another matter. A good deal of effort has gone into justifying the high price. Careful printing with judicious use of coloured ink for paragraph dividers and page numbers is set against colourful illustrations and there are pictorial endpapers and even a ribbon bookmark. It is certainly a volume which will grace a collector’s bookshelf and would enable a couple of tatty worn-out paperbacks to be discarded, although it might be no replacement for precious first-editions. However, it only contains the same words as any other edition and at the end of the day the words are what is important and there are less expensive ways to find them. So, whether a new reader or an old collector, you pays your money and you takes your choice as the saying goes.

Terry Pratchett's THE COLOUR OF MAGIC: THE ILLUSTRATED SCREENPLAY

By Vadim Jean

Gollancz / 255 pages / hardcover /
£20 / ISBN 978-0575080454

Reviewed by Michael Jones

This is the screenplay of the Sky TV adaptation broadcast last Easter. It is profusely illustrated, with both publicity stills and shots from the broadcast as well as design drawings and bits of storyboard to make a pleasing souvenir of the production. Plus its main raison d'être, the script (one must understand that the original script as written may be changed as production rolls along).

One wonders at whom this is actually aimed. It provides little, if anything, which could not be enjoyed to better effect by watching the TV movie (which is now available to buy on DVD for less than the cost of this book) while on the other hand it cannot possibly serve as an effective alternative to the original book as a version to read – although it could perhaps be regarded as a kind of graphic novel. Perhaps the best way to use it would be to have it on one's lap while watching the TV, thereby hoping to enhance understanding and enjoyment - if one is sad enough!

However, the publishers did the same thing for the previous HOGFATHER broadcast and that must have sold well enough for them to think it was worth doing again. There must be a lot of fanatical collectors out there!

Be that as it may, the most useful purpose this review can serve is to let you know that such a book exists. A keen collector may well choose to buy it as a souvenir and will probably not be disappointed. Someone more cynical might dismiss it as a money-making publicity exercise.
