

July, 1942

#1

Perfectione

A Member once said, with the greatest of glee, that a Blue Printed paper just never could be. He then set to work, with a glass and a light, and seven dollars of stuff - He worked every night. Ten minutes the Sun was exposed to each print, The paper he wasted it cost him a mint. But he'd be the first - He was quite sure he'd set a "Tag" we'd remember - One like "Bobliquep." Along comes a stinker, as myself in this case with the modern machinery that prints like a case. There's one process left, I will give him a hint, The Plutonian method of Ereats a la Gfint.
