

THE JOHN DICKSON CARR BIBLIOPHILE, No. 1.

The Biblio-File series, No. 3.

-----
Edited by Rick Sneary, 2962 Santa Ana Street, South Gate, Calif., for the August 1966 F.A.P.A. Mailing, and for others who have shown an interest in the works of John Dickson Carr. Thank and most of the credit for the original research on this project goes to James Wilson, Dave Hulan, Charlie Brown, and to Anthony Boucher for checking the list for errors. Thanks too, to Len Moffatt, for publishing assistance.

Since 1930 John Dickson Carr has written something over 70 books, under his own name and that of his non-secret pen-name of Carter Dickson. He has collaborated on at least two books, and turned out numerous radio scripts, magazine short stories, articles and theater reviews. The following list of book titles is offered as an aid to collectors of Carr, in finding what they are missing, and to the chronological order of the series.

Most of the Carr/Dickson stories fall into one of a number of series, and while it is not necessary that they be read in the order of their appearance, the development of the characters or the history is more orderly if they are. All books in a series are by one name, except as noted. Mr. Boucher notes that all the Carr titles have been originally published by Harper (later Harper & Row), and the Dickson by Morrow, excepting collaborations.. "How many authors have stayed with the same publisher for 36 years?" = It has been impossible to trace all the different pocketbook publications, but variant titles for British or pocketbook editions are given "(=...=)". Date following title is first copyright date.
