

SEASON'S GREETINGS, HOLIDAY FANS!

It hardly seems possible, but another year has rolled around! It's been a busy year for us (our third together), with Sharman involved in acting and hobbies, and Bill in writing and with his hobbies.

Sharman spent six months studying with the Great Mr. S. himself at the Lee Strasberg School of Face-Making, then some teaching herself, as the voice coach for the cats on the Meow Mix Cat Food commercial. And, of course, an acting job in CAGED DEAD WOMEN.

Bill has been writing up a storm: Who's Who In Galapagos Turtle-Breeding (Illustrated), Sex and Your Banana, 100 New Howard Hughes Cliches, Slaves of the Boogieman Nebula, and one of his favorites, Zen Turtling.

Sharman got a new hairstyle, Bill was acquitted of turtle-molesting charges, and together they toured Western America in the Fall.

Our adopted child Gerald R.("Slowpoke") is learning to talk--he wrote "Mommy" on the window in teeny-tiny footprints and is doing well at the California Institute for the Exceptional Snail. "Fern", our good Boston green-friend, died after a lingering illness, and was interred last October at the Hollywood Park Cemetary for Houseplants. We'll miss his broad "a's" and curling fingers.

On-going work includes Sharman's cookbook, Toad Jello and the Sensuous You, and her charity work with victims of sexual malnutrion at the Marilyn Chambers Half-Way House. Bill labors away on his magnum opus, Art Deco Masterpieces on Turtle Shells, and he continues his life-long hobby of collecting urine samples from famous movie stars. (He got Donald O'Conner in the men's room of the Beverly Wilshire Hotel and it proudly rests between Sonny Tufts and Scotty Beckett!)

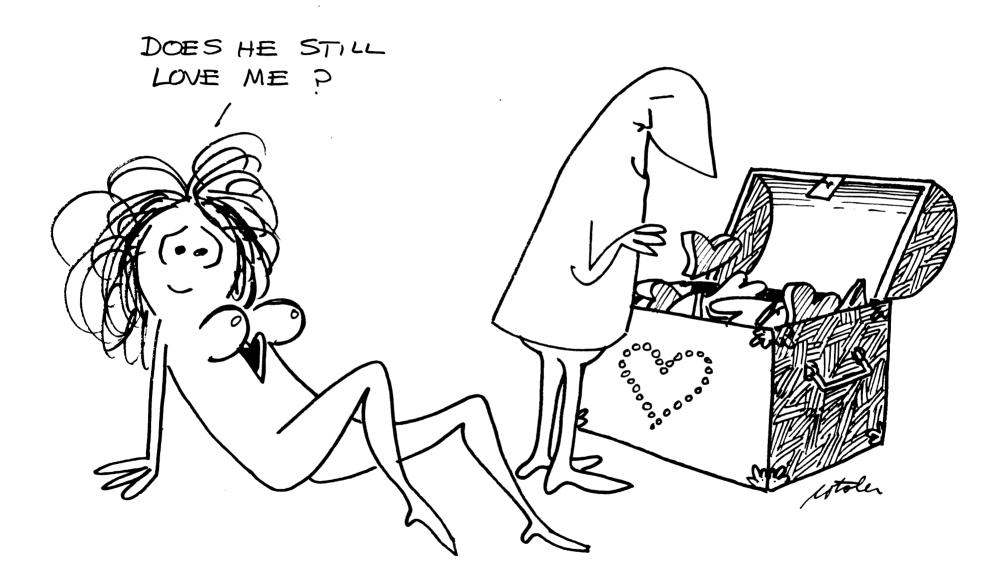

We are looking forward to 1977. CAGED DEAD WOMEN will be in release and the paperback edition of Simplified Hippopotami Sexual Behavior will be out, as well as a trade book edition of The Bedside Book of Turtle Hair (Illustrated).

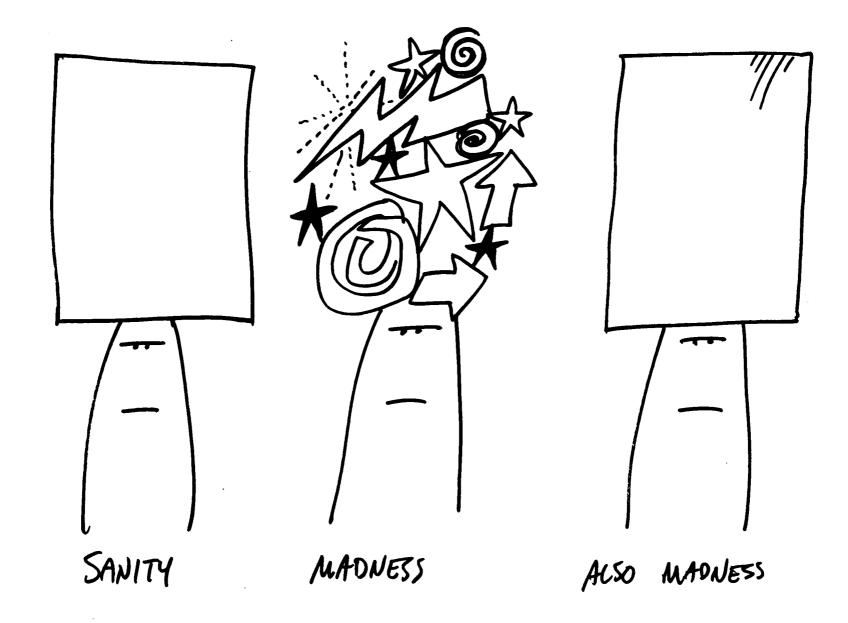

MERRY CHRISTMAS FROM SHARMAN DIVONO AND WILLIAM ROTSLER
